Post Nears Arctic Region of Siberia, Landing in Irkutsk

American 75 Hours Out of New York—16 Hours Ahead of Record

TRAVELING AT 138 But He Averaged 150 M. P. H. From New York to Berlin

By the Associated Press
Wiley Post, Oklahoma speed flier, was 16 hours 34 minutes ahead of the Post-Gatty round-the-world record when he dropped down at Irkutsk, Siberia, at 6:35 o'clock Hope time Tuesday morning.

His elapsed time from New York City was 75 hours 25 minutes, compared with an elapsed time of 91 hours 59 minutes for himself and Harold Gatty at the same place in 1931.

Crosses Siberia
MOSCOW, Russia.—(P)—Wiley Post, continuing his solo flight around the world, passed over Krasnoyarsk at 11:56 o'clock Moscow time (2:30 Hope) Tuesday morning.

At Krasnoyarsk he had completed almost half of the hop from Novosibirsk to Irkutsk, Siberia.

Averages 138 M. P. H.
NOVOSIBIRSK, Siberia.—(P)—Wiley Post, American around-the-world flier, landed here at 6:27 a. m. Tuesday Moscow time (9:27 p. m. Monday, Hope time) from Moscow.

The Oklahoman, who is seeking to better the time for a like journey he set with Harold Gatty in 1931, left Moscow at 5:12 p. m. Monday (8:12 a. m. Hope time).

Thus, he flew the 1,818 miles in 13 hours and 15 minutes, at an average speed of about 138 miles an hour, as compared to the estimated hour rate of 150 miles he flew from New York to Berlin.

It was believed that his mark compared well with the fast schedule he set for himself, even though he lost time in Berlin and at the second stop in Koenigsberg, Germany, because of refueling delays and bad weather.

200-Mile-an-Hour Ships to Fly Over Hope Daily

Air transportation developments of nation-wide business significance were revealed in such rapid succession the first two weeks in July the public scarcely grasped the scope and extent of the swiftly-formed new picture the industry now is presenting.

Leading the way in this new deal in aerial transport, American Airways announced through L. B. Manning, Chicago, chairman of the board, a list of progressive steps his company has taken recently which may be accepted as typical of the industry as a whole.

NEW YORK — Abolish all honeymoons and young couples will have a real chance at happy marriage!

Mary Borden, distinguished London novelist, makes that shocking statement.

"Marriage that might have begun and continued happily got off to the wrong start because of the honeymoon," Miss Borden asserts, along with a lot of other startling and sensible bits of advice in her new book, "The Technique of Marriage."

Few women will admit, even to themselves that their honeymoon was a strain, a bore, a nerve-racking period of adjustment or a miserable failure that has estranged them temporarily and made their married life unnecessarily difficult," the novelist says.

1ST ELECTION RETURN

First Scattered Alabama Vote Is Favoring Repeal

Absentee Ballots in Three Counties Show 105 to 59 Against

STATE ISSUE ALSO State Amendments Voted on as Well as Prohi Repeal

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(P)—Aroused to interest by a spectacular fight over proposed constitutional amendments in Tuesday's election, in which prohibition repeal also is an issue, Alabama voters turned out in unusual numbers for an off-year.

The weather was cloudy but not expected to affect the turnout.

Election managers at one Selma, Ala., box said unofficially that 52 of the first 50 votes cast were for repeal.

A tabulation of 40 absentee ballots at Fort Payne, Ala., showed 7 votes for repeal, and 33 against.

The complete count of absentee ballots in three Alabama counties gave: For repeal 105; against repeal 59.

Mr. and Mrs. Shiver left Hope over three weeks ago, visiting in Washington, Atlantic City and Chicago.

Senator Robinson Will Be Greeted

Vinsonhaler Heads Committee to Welcome Him on Return Home

LITTLE ROCK.—Dr. Frank Vinsonhaler, dean of the University of Arkansas School of Medicine, was named Monday as general chairman of a committee which will direct plans for a statewide reception for Senator Joe T. Robinson when he returns to Arkansas within the next two weeks.

The date for the reception was fixed tentatively as August 2, but will be subject to change, if Senator Robinson finds that he cannot reach here by that time.

Dr. Vinsonhaler was selected as general chairman by a temporary committee formed last week to make preliminary arrangements for the reception.

The program probably will be held at Travelers Hotel.

An Advisory Committee of 100 or more members will be selected from the state at large to help plan details of the reception program. Mr. Vinsonhaler said this committee will be representative of the entire citizenship of the state and that it will be non-partisan.

Civic clubs, patriotic organizations and various other groups will be represented on the Reception Committee.

Star Extra At 10 P. M.

First news of the prohibition referendum in Arkansas and Alabama, and the Johnson-Wood contest for chief justice, will be given Hope by an extra edition of The Star about 10 o'clock Tuesday night.

The Associated Press state election wire will open at 8 o'clock, carrying full returns on Alabama and Arkansas.

There will be no broadcast at The Star office; but local returns on Hempstead county will be broadcast from Jack's Newsstand, Main and Division streets.

The Star election extra will go out on the rural routes, serving two-thirds of its subscription list.

Total of Only 370 Ballots, Including County Box

WINDUP FOR DRYS Closing Rally Held Monday Night at City Hall

A light vote was indicated in the City of Hope Tuesday. Tabulations from the wards at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon showed a total of 370 votes cast:

Ward 1-A: Arkansas Bank & Trust Co. building; 89 votes.
Ward 1-B: Hope Fertilizer Co. office; 35 votes.

Final Dry Rally
A final rally held Monday night at the city hall brought an end to the dry campaign waged actively in Hempstead county for the past several days. Repeal advocates wound up their campaign at Spring Hill last Friday night.

Five speakers appeared on the dry rally program Monday night. They spoke to an audience of 57 persons.

The Rev. Mr. Queen, pastor of First Baptist church of DeQueen, was the principal speaker. He substituted on the program for the Rev. Leland Clegg, Little Rock minister.

Others who spoke were W. S. Atkins, Hope attorney; the Rev. M. E. Testerman, pastor of First Christian church; the Rev. J. L. Cannon, pastor of First Methodist church; The Rev. Wallace R. Rogers, First Baptist minister, told the audience the purpose of the meeting and introduced the principal speaker.

Chief Justice Race
The only other question before voters of the entire state is the election of a chief justice of the state supreme court.

One candidate is the present Chief Justice, C. E. Johnson, serving by appointment. He was named as the Democratic nominee by a state convention and is backed by the state administration.

The other candidate is Judge Carroll D. Wood, an associate justice for 34 years, who retired four years ago. He is running as an independent, contending Judge Johnson's nomination was by an illegal convention.

Cotton Approaches 12 Cents Per Pound

For the second consecutive day cotton established a new high for this season Tuesday, New York contracts closing at 11.90.

This was an increase of 12 points, 60 cent a bale, from Monday's close of 11.78, the best previous figure this season.

Fate's Innocent Victim

Her step-father slain in a bandit massacre and her mother jailed on charges of complicity in the crime, seven-year-old Dardanella Luce is being cared for by relatives at Wenona, Ill., innocent of the tragic trick fate has played upon her.

Dardanella Luce
The wife of one of the election judges in Upper Hill township, Prairie county, cast the only vote there against repeal of the 18th amendment in Tuesday's general election.

With all votes in the township accounted for at 10:30 o'clock Tuesday morning officials announced the result as:

For repeal 44; against repeal 1. "I couldn't do anything with her," said B. C. Purvis, election judge, who himself voted for repeal.

It was the first precinct in the state to report.

Total Vote Is Light
LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—Early reports Tuesday served to bear out predictions of a comparatively light vote in the state-wide referendum on repeal of the 18th amendment.

Fair weather prevailed with a cool breeze blowing.

The heaviest voting is expected in the late afternoon. The polls opened at 8 o'clock and will close at 6:30.

Speedy Count Expected
With the only questions before the voters of the entire state the issue of repeal and the election of a chief justice of the supreme court, a speedy count of the vote is expected.

The first precinct to report, Upper Hill township in Prairie county, where all the votes were in at 10:30 a. m., gave:

For repeal 44; against repeal 1. The same township gave for chief justice:

C. E. Johnson, administration-picked candidate 44; Carroll D. Wood, former associate justice, 0.

Governor Casis Vote
Governor Futrell, who went to his home town of Paragould to vote, cast the 70th ballot in his home precinct at 10 a. m. He did not say how he voted.

The voters are expressing themselves directly on the question of repeal, and at the same time are selecting wet or dry delegates, one from each county, to a state convention on August 1, which will cast the state's vote for or against repeal.

The convention will be bound as a unit by the state-wide result.

Acres Pledged to Be Plowed Under

WASHINGTON.—(P)—Farm administrators said Monday they are working out a plan so that cotton farmers may plow up portions of their fields before receiving formal notification of acceptance of the contract offers they signed in the acreage reduction campaign.

Administrators will seek to do this in cases where local climatic conditions make it possible for farmers to plant a feed crop providing they destroy part of their growing cotton soon. C. A. Cobb, cotton production chief, is preparing the new plan which was found necessary in view of the big task of tabulating the contract offers.

Because so many contracts signed by farmers to curtail their production from 25 to 50 per cent have not yet been received here it was determined Monday that no contracts can be accepted until after Wednesday night, which is the deadline for county agents to send the contracts to Washington.

The result is that hopes of getting the first checks out by Wednesday have been abandoned and there is little likelihood that payments of benefits to farmers for their agreements can be made before Friday and Saturday.

Administrators estimated that cotton farmers have offered to destroy about 10,500,000 acres. They estimated that 1,000,000 growers, or about half of the number raising cotton, signed agreements and that acceptance of all contracts would reduce the potential crop well in excess of 3,500,000 bales. However, it is not certain how many contracts will be rejected. Some of them will have to be returned because they are not in proper form.

Stamps to Boost Rates on Water

Declining Municipal Revenues Force Posting of Increase

STAMPS, Ark.—Because of a steady decrease in city funds, and an increase in the cost of maintenance of the recently acquired city water system, the Stamps City Council, by a unanimous vote, has ordered an increase in the water rates, effective August 1.

Rates that were $1.25 a month will be raised to $1.50. Rates for consumers with bath fixtures will be increased from $1.25 to $2. Rates for service stations and drug stores will be $3 instead of $2. Commercial rates charged the two ice plants also will be increased. Meters will be installed as soon as the city obtains them.

The council also discussed advisability of discontinuing some of the street lights to reduce expenses. The Arkansas Power & Light Co. has agreed to a reduction in the light bill provided smaller watt lamps are installed.

Abolish Honeymoons? Yes, Say Three Famous People

The honeymoon is anything but a heavenly prelude to long marital bliss as Mary Borden (center) examines it in her new book, "The Technique of Marriage." Her verdict draws lusty huzzahs from Vicki Baum (left), Viennese author, and Howard Chandler Christy (right) famous illustrator and portrait painter.

it that way in retrospect. "But I believe that this holiday, whose only reason for existence is pleasure, is very often not pleasant at all, but removed as it is from their home-setting, their friends and mutual interests, is painful and difficult—a disappointing experience both to the man and the woman."

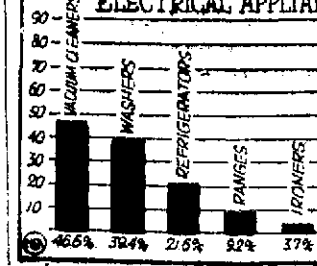

Had No Honeymoon
Vicki Baum, Viennese author of "Grand Hotel," supports Miss Borden's views with astonishing vigor. "I am against honeymoons—emphatically," Miss Baum states. "I have been happily married for 17 years and never had the slightest suspicion of a honeymoon. And I firmly think my marriage would probably not have turned out so well if my husband and I had spent the first fortnight or month of it, in hotels, sleepers and sight-seeing buses."

To travel together is the hardest test of any human relationship. I am sure that many young people who have quarrels, arguments and misunderstandings in Havana, in Bermuda or Atlantic City would be perfectly happy and peaceful in their own happy home.

Public Ridicule
"As I understand it, the idea of a honeymoon is to take a young couple out of their usual environment into one of seclusion, but where can a young couple find more privacy than within their own four walls? It is no secret that honeymooners are a target for ridicule for everyone from the

WASHINGTON LETTER

Roosevelt aids France's bluff

Wouldn't dare force collapse

By RODNEY DUTCHER
Washington Correspondent
WASHINGTON—Roosevelt believed the French bluff could be called at the London economic conference. And he proved to be right.

The president's serene confidence that the conference would go on—manifested at a moment when the whole world seemed to believe it was as good as adjourned—amazed most of us.

But he was betting on the belief that France wouldn't dare force a breakup. A rather prevalent private attitude among our officials is that the French can be depended on to agree to anything which gives them the big end of the deal and to disagree with us on almost anything else.

France, leader and keystone of the gold bloc, wanted the dollar pegged in order to avoid inflation of the franc, expansion of American commerce at the expense of gold countries and loss of French prestige through possible failure to stay on the gold basis.

World Sympathy With U. S.
Obviously, the French position after Roosevelt declared against their brand of stabilization was either a bluff or a bluff.

His advisers decided it was a bluff, after seeing themselves what France would do by walking out arm in arm with the rest of the gold bloc.

That would be lining up economically with the small nations of Europe—namely, Belgium, Italy, and the Balkans.

That may yet happen; the conference may yet collapse. But the fact remains that France has taken her first licking from us at a post-war international conference. No wonder Mr. Andrew Borden refers to us, in effect, as "the new U. S. being 'jobbed'."

The most logical explanation of Roosevelt's so-called "face against currency stabilization to come from any informed source is that the president came to the conclusion that this country was about to be "jobbed."

He had realized the possibility of conflict between his domestic program and international co-operation all along. But he felt that agreements might be reached which would be fair all around.

Then came a concerted European attempt to make us consider the war debts at London—which we had refused to do. That didn't encourage Roosevelt's hopes, but he still backed toward an agreement based on current price levels and domestic purchasing powers of nations plus other economic agreements.

When he realized that France and other nations were insistent on a type of stabilization sure to react against our own rising prices he quickly called the tune.

Import Quota Fight Due
If the conference gets that far, you can expect a hot and extremely complicated fight over import quotas.

When a country erects that type of a trade barrier it theoretically limits imports from each exporting country to an identical percentage of previous import volume.

But there are innumerable tricks used to discriminate against an individual exporting nation—often the United States—and we want to end those practices.

Keep Children Busy to Break Thumb-Sucking Habit

Billy was three and he sucked his thumb. Jeanie, his sister, was six months old and she sucked her thumb. She didn't suck it all the time—just when she went to sleep. At other times she lay and cooed and played and never thought of her hand.

But her mother was terribly worried. She wasn't going to have another thumb-sucker in the family if she could help it.

When Billy was that age she had worked with him terribly hard to try to break the habit. She never could, however, and now she was at her wits' end to know what to do.

From Bad to Worse
She bought some little bulb-shaped affairs to tie over Jeanie's hands so she could not get them to her mouth. Jeanie mouthed them and screamed and cried. After a week of struggle her mother tied her arms down to her sides by wrapping a big towel about her body.

This was worse still. The baby, like all babies, was terrorized at restriction, and it seemed as though she just never would go to sleep.

Her mother did all the things she had done with Billy at his age plus all the new things she heard about. She tried one after the other only to give them up because the baby needed it. "Let her suck her thumb for awhile," she declared. "I'm tired struggling."

So Jeanie began all over again. She would drop off happily to sleep with the tiny pink thumb in her mouth. One day Mattie came in to wash and she asked to see the baby.

"The darlin'," she cooed, wiping her hands on her apron and bending low over the bassinet. "I wish mine was like a suckin' their thumbs so sweet."

"What did you do to cure it?" "Cure it?" Mattie stared. "Why nothin' at all. They cured their selves when they could walk. Anyway my kids in to play all the time. Just so suckin'." Eight of 'em.

"Billy sucks his thumb." "He wouldn't if there was eight kids. He just ain't got nothin' else to do."

"I've spent three years trying to break him." "Gracious goodness! Is that so. Maybe if you stopped worryin' he'll quit."

"I'm trying to shame him out of it." "Suggestion for Cure
"The lamb! Well, maybe that makes him worse too. They do say the more you fuss and talk the worse they get. Say—" Mattie had a thought. "Why don't you get him a dog, or some bunnies, or a lot of things to keep him awful busy? Just so busy he'll forget about his thumb. And get kids in to play all the time. Just so he won't have time to get his fingers up. And this here baby I wouldn't worry about. Honestly, I think you're gonna have trouble with all this tiny business. I think it just sets 'em."

"I hope you're right, Mattie. Maybe I will keep Billy busier." "A year later Mattie said one day, "Say, Mrs. Smith, remember when they sucked their thumbs?" "Yes I do, Mattie. And you were their doctor."

"Maybe it don't always work," said Mattie, "but it just seemed to me like sense."

If you're the kind of a person who is always dashing home from business just in time to make a dinner date, you'll need some kind of a skin freshener which takes little time to use. There is a heavy cream which contains fruit juices. It takes only about five minutes for it to dry. Then you wash it off. And, I might add, all the dust and grime in your pores wash away with it.

For hands that perspire, ruining your gloves and causing you no end of embarrassment, there are liquids which tend to check the perspiration. Keep one bottle of it on your dressing table and carry one with you.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

ELINOR STAFFORD, 30, falls in love with 35-year-old BARRETT COLVIN, who has returned to New York after years abroad. Barrett has made a name for himself as an archaeologist. He is about to ask Elinor to marry him when she learns of her father's scheming mother, LIDA STAFFORD, interposes and succeeds in breaking up the romance.

When Elinor's aunt, wealthy MISS ELLA SEXTON, dies she leaves her entire fortune to Barrett. Then drunken VANCE CARTER shoots BENTWELL STAFFORD, Elinor's father. Barrett, who does not want the Sexton fortune, tells Elinor that if she will marry him and live in his home as a guest for a year he will give the entire sum to her to divide among the relatives. Elinor agrees, knowing the money may save her father's life.

The marriage takes place next day. Barrett finds himself falling in love with Elinor over again. Then one day he sees her with BOB TELFARE and believes she has been meeting Telfare secretly. His suspicions are renewed and he treats her coldly. This makes Elinor miserable.

Her father's health is slow to improve and the doctor advises a warmer climate. Elinor goes with her father to Aiken. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXII

ELINOR wrote Barrett stilted little notes about the weather, her father's condition, and the routine of the household. He read them. He could not help it. He carried them in an inner coat pocket and scorned himself for keeping them. He tried to burn them one night in the library fireplace. Instead he burned the hand that salvaged them.

Toward the end of April Barrett saw Lida Stafford for the first time since her daughter had gone south. Lida appeared on a Sunday morning, wearing a dress so simple a man would call it plain, though to a woman it bore the unmistakable stamp of Paris.

"My dear Barrett!" she murmured, gliding into the library. Stiffly he took her outstretched hands. He heard her ask, "Loney?" and responded heavily, "Very!"

"You must dine with me some night, Barrett. I would so like to know you better!" He murmured vaguely about having to get a great deal of work out of the way. He detested the woman!

Lida settled by the hearth. She stretched a slender foot toward the fender. Her ankles were still quite as good as Elinor's, she saw happily.

"I came in because I have found myself to be in the most amazing position," she began. "Yes?" he prompted without enthusiasm.

"Overdrawn again! Can you fancy it, Barrett? I simply know nothing of figures! And I can't seem to learn!" He said nothing.

"I knew if Elinor were in town that she'd help me out—for a little time—and this morning I thought, 'But what is more natural than to turn to my Elinor's husband? The man whom she so adores!'"

HE opened his cigar case, offered her one and lit one for himself after lighting hers. "Mrs. Stafford," he said slowly after a moment's silence, "the last time Elinor lent you money—which you have not returned to her—I told her I did not like it. She promised me she would not do it again. You see, therefore, that, while I am sorry to refuse you, I cannot help you out—"

Lida grew white, her eyes hard. She laughed harshly. Without heeding the interruption, Barrett went on. "Elinor settled on you and your husband a large fortune, more than I wanted her to settle upon you—"

"I quite believe that!" Lida broke in seathily. "If you can't manage on that you couldn't manage on any amount," Barrett said, still coolly. "What a delightful lecture!"

"You'll have to pull up or be very miserable," he stated. "Easy spending is a habit, you know—"

She rose. With a slow, almost insolent gesture she pulled her fur close around her soft, white throat. "I shall not forget," she said, "that I came to you for help and that you refused me!"

"I'm sorry you feel as you do, Mrs. Stafford. Can't you see that when I asked Elinor to refuse you I pledged myself to do the same thing?"

"Elinor would not have to know."

"I do not lie, Mrs. Stafford—"

Her face hardened. She caught the implication he had not meant to make with his statement.

SHE left the house shaking with rage. There was Miss Ella Sexton's house across the street. Miss Ella had been influenced by Barrett's scheming and persuaded not to leave her money as it should have gone. If the money had been left as it should have been there would be no need of approaching Elinor or her husband for loans. The shoe would be on the other foot! As things were there were few chances to even up with Barrett Colvin. Unless he had on the side some little affair! Lida could hurt him that way, extract from him what she wished with the pledge of silence. Who was it who had said that he was always running up to Connecticut? Why did he go there? Had she hit upon it—the fact that would level his pride and open his purse?

It cost a great deal, Lida knew, to have anyone "shadowed" but the original cost might prove to be one of her best investments. She moistened her tinted lips.

If she could find her proud and lofty son-in-law in a compromising situation how she would put on the screws! And someone had said he drove to Connecticut often.

Monday found Lida abroad early. She usually woke about 10 o'clock to bathe and return to bed for her breakfast. After that she would dawdle over letters, the newspapers or perhaps a sensational novel. Then came the time of dressing which always took an hour and often more. As the clock struck one she usually sauntered forth to meet some one for luncheon or to hunt up diversion for the day.

This Monday morning found her up at eight and dressed by nine. In her car a half hour later she ordered Grier to an address on a side street.

The chauffeur, waiting before this address, smiled the cynical smile that came often to his honest Irish lips. His eyes were on the gilt lettering that appeared on a plate glass window. Women like Lida Stafford went to detective agencies for just one reason—to ferret out secrets to use for blackmail or a divorce.

GRIER wondered about Mrs. Stafford's errand as he waited in the new car she had bought the day after her daughter's marriage. "She can't be havin' that husband of hers shadowed," he mused. "He can't get gay, tied like he is to his bed and a wheel chair!" Grier gave up the riddle.

Meanwhile inside Lida had explained her errand. The sleek individual who sat back of the desk had listened to her tale and written Barrett Colvin's name and New York address on a pad. Now he said, "We'll do all that is possible and we'll keep you informed, Mrs. Stafford. If the facts are what you think they are and Mr. Colvin makes a trip to Connecticut soon it won't take us very long to give you the lowdown!"

Lida smiled. "We usually number these cases," the man went on. "For one thing it makes telephone calls easier. Your case will be—" he consulted records—"6072B."

Lida wrote, "6072B" in a small engagement book, murmuring as she did so, "Thank you!"

"Not at all, Mrs. Stafford—"

She rose and drew her coat around her. The man's eyes apologetically ran from head to foot and back again. Lida was warm, reassured. She had been so alone since Vance Carter's "absurd outbreak." Men had been shy of her. She had once or twice felt the threat of age and wondered what she would do with time—and herself—when she was old. She had no investment that would return peace as the fire burned low. She did not realize her lack of resource. She thought only, "Old age is hideous!"

She left the place smiling over the memory of this strange man's sensuously glittering eyes. Her daughter would have shuddered at their light and struggled to forget it.

The day was clear, unusually warm. "Perhaps," Lida mused, "Barrett will drive up there this afternoon!"

'Hold Your Man' at Saenger Tuesday

Jean Harlow and Clark Gable in Anita Loos Story

Jean Harlow and Clark Gable are teamed again in "Hold Your Man," which opens Tuesday at the Saenger, following in the wake of their smashing success in "Red Dust," which brought a popular demand for the present reunion.

In a story calculated to afford the co-stars opportunity for performances fitting their individual talents and personalities, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer offers a production both intensely dramatic and romantic. An original by Anita Loos, the story concerns a rowdy love affair that begins as a sketchy interlude but winds up as a vividly human romance.

As the cheap little drifter who goes to prison for the man she loves, Miss Harlow endows her characterization with a wistful sympathy and humor. Particularly in the incident in which she awakens to approaching motherhood is she effective. Gable banters his way through the early part of the picture with delightful nonchalance which sharply contrasts his important work in the climactic sequences when he risks arrest on a murder charge to give a name to the unborn child.

A Sennett comedy and a Mickey Mouse complete the program. Wednesday night is hosiery night.

New Orleans States Sold to Times-Picayune Company

NEW ORLEANS—(AP)—The New Orleans States, owned by the estate of the late Col. Robert Ewing, was purchased Monday by the New Orleans Times-Picayune Publishing company, and will continue to be operated as an evening paper along with the morning Times-Picayune.

The States will be published as the New Orleans States in the plant of the Times-Picayune, as the sale did not include the States plant. While the sale does not reduce the number of newspapers published in New Orleans, it restricts the advertising field to two establishments, as the other evening and morning newspapers are published by the interests of James M. Thompson, the evening item, and the morning Tribune.

The sale was for cash and included good will, circulation, advertising contracts, Associated Press membership and contracts of other services.

Acquisition of the States by the Times-Picayune brings two independent Democratic newspapers under the same ownership, which is headed by L. K. Nicholson as president.

The Ewing estate owned the New Orleans States, the Shreveport Times, and the Monroe Evening News-Star and morning World.

I learned about "Toasting" from my husband

I used to think that "Toasting" was just an advertising phrase. But one day my husband explained to me what "Toasting" is—and what it does. Where he learned it all, I don't know, but I began to understand the difference in cigarettes. Now I find myself enjoying Luckies' mildness and fine taste with a new respect. But even more—since I am a woman quite sensitive to personal daintiness—and since my cigarette and my lips are so intimately related, I especially appreciate the comforting purity of "Toasting". Naturally, with me it's always "Luckies Please!"
